

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A notebook computer comprising a base unit and a display, wherein the display is detachable from the base unit, and can close to and open from the base unit when jointed together is provided. Of which, the display comprises a display panel, a motherboard, a microprocessor and a telecommunication device, wherein the motherboard on which the microprocessor is situated is electrically connected to the display panel while the telecommunication device is electrically connected to the motherboard. The design of the display according to the invention can be attached to and detached from the motherboard, or even can be separated from the notebook computer to be used as an independent web pad providing two uses in an appliance which is indeed convenient to operate.

* * * * *